VOLATILITY!

vol·a·tile

adjective \və-lə-tēl, especially British-tī(-ə)\

- : likely to change in a very sudden or extreme way
- : having or showing extreme or sudden changes of emotion
- : likely to become dangerous or out of control

2015 has been very volatile in the market so far. What is going on?

Triple digit days, one way or the other, have been the rule in the market so far this year. It can really frazzle ones nerves if you let it. We have gotten pretty spoiled over the last several years as volatility in the market has been very light.

We had a big bout of volatility last August, then an even bigger bout in October of last year.

We are now undergoing another round of very volatile action in the market. Volatility usually is correlated strongly with fear. I think that the definition from above that best fits the market environment right now is #2. “having or showing extreme or sudden changes of emotion.”

What is behind all of this sudden volatility? Let's begin with crude oil. Everything was coming up roses as the fracking revolution took hold here in the U.S. Jobs have been created, money was being made, and we are becoming less and less dependent on foreign oil.

Then towards the end of last summer, that old supply/demand equation started to get out of balance. And boy, did it get out of balance! Since then we have witnessed a swift and vicious bear market in oil. This is a good lesson on how just how fast things can fall apart in an asset class, stock market, housing market, or even tulip bulbs.

On the way up, it seems like there is no tomorrow. Investors cannot buy fast enough. Drillers cannot work fast enough. Lenders can't lend fast enough. Companies can't hire enough employees, and boom times look like they will never end. But they always do, and when it happens it can get real ugly, real fast!

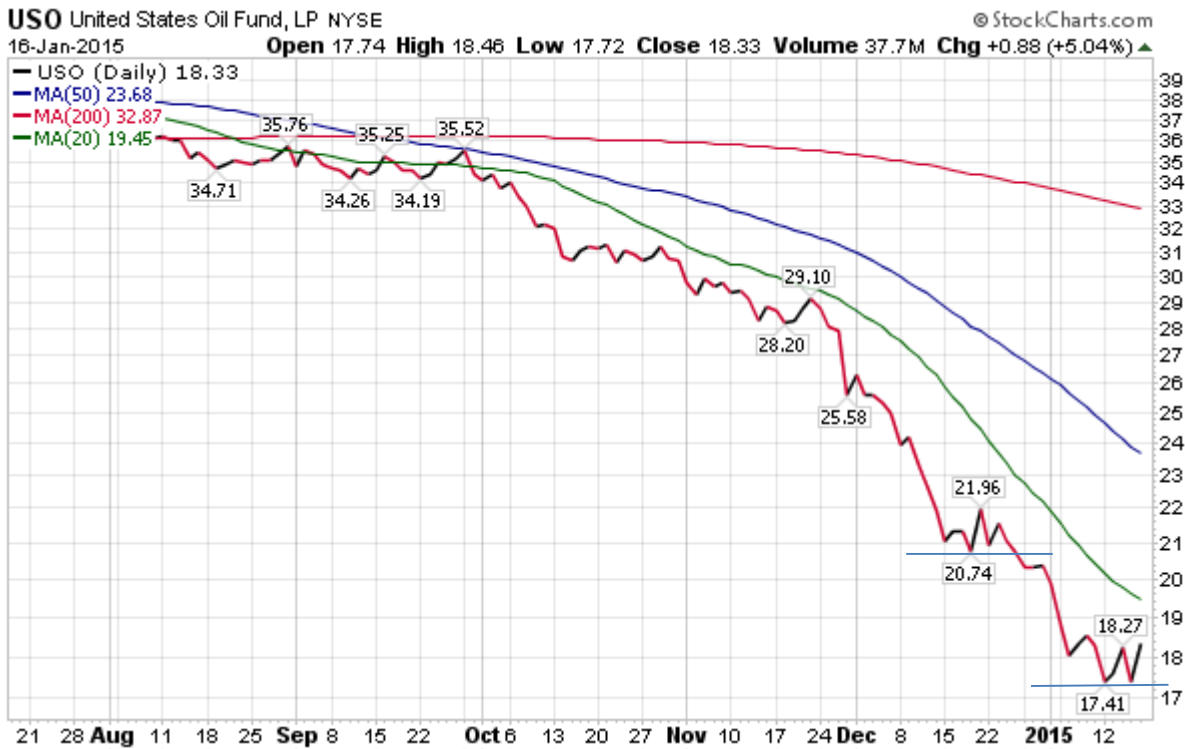

On the way down, investors cannot flee fast enough. Lenders cannot quit lending fast enough, and companies cannot lay off fast enough. It seems that normalcy, let alone boom times, will never return to the market. Yet, it always does.

Nobody called the top. Nobody saw the crash coming. Nobody knows where the bottom is. And nobody knows where oil prices will be one year from now. It has been my observation over the years that trouble almost always shows up first in the technical pattern, then it spreads to relative strength, and finally to fundamentals.

Unfortunately, for die-hard fundamentalists, it is way too late to get out by the time fundamentals begin to deteriorate. That is why you see so many national brokerage firms just now downgrading the energy stocks from a buy to hold! What? That is right! For the most part, they ignore technicals and relative strength.

They finally start lowering their earnings estimates after most of the heavy damage has been done. Do you know how many times that I have heard the following story: “they had me ride my stocks right into the ground!” Relying on fundamentals alone, is one of the reasons why. If you worked down the hall from a national brokerage firm and observed their work habits, you would have another reason why.

Technicals lead on the way down and they lead on the way up. Having said that, how are the technicals of light, sweet crude shaping up now?

Oil is attempting to put in a bottom right now, but as you can see, it tried to do it three weeks ago and failed. This bottoming attempt looks a little more serious to me, but after just two weeks of bottoming action, it is still too soon to call a bottom here.

This past week, I pointed out a few oil stocks that look very interesting to me. I featured FANG on Thursday's show.

Diamondback Energy not only appears to have put in a bottom, but it also appears that a new uptrend is underway. I do not own the stock, but it is on my watch list. The relative strength is still horrible, and the fundamentals are not great, but the technicals could be leading here.

Continental Resources (CLR) is another good example of the attempt at a new rally in the oil stocks. CLR is a former leader, and it would be a good candidate for some bottom fishing.

It is always a good idea to look at the sector to see if it is behaving in a similar fashion.

It too is trying to put in a bottom, but I will add a word of caution here, it made a similar attempt back in October and failed. The stocks took another big leg down. That scenario is still possible here.

SO OIL PRICES CONTINUE TO BE A BIG, BIG SOURCE OF VOLATILITY IN THE MARKET.

Are low oil prices telling us that the global economy is falling apart? Are low oil prices more of a benefit or detriment to the U.S. economy? I showed in my newsletter several weeks ago, that falling oil prices seem to be a benefit to the market and to the economy. The 2008 bear market was preceded by a parabolic climb in oil prices. Of course the parabolic climb in housing prices also had a lot to do with the ensuing bear.

OTHER SOURCES OF VOLATILITY ARE WILD CURRENCY SWINGS, A CONTINUED DROP IN INTEREST RATES, AND A SUDDEN BID IN THE PRECIOUS METALS.

Let's begin with the Swiss Franc:

The Swiss used to cap their currency against the Euro. On Thursday they shocked the world by removing the cap. You can see the stunning result. The Swiss Franc rose by 23%! I'll bet Putin's oligarchs and other despots around the world were happy. Many of them have secret Swiss bank accounts. This is the biggest rise in a currency that I have ever witnessed.

What does this mean for the global economy and for your portfolio?

The Euro continues to get CRUSHED! It is fast moving towards parity with the U.S. dollar.

This makes European goods more competitive on the world market, while Swiss goods go out of sight. This sudden move also helps gold to move higher. A plunging Euro, helping gold to move higher. Gold BROKE OUT to the upside this past week. This is a significant development.

I pointed out gold stock on Wednesday's show that is a good proxy for the group:

Here is how the group looks:

A word of caution is also in order here too. Gold has had several “false starts” over the last several years. This time it looks real to me, however. I have not bought anything yet, but I am watching this development very closely. If I do buy anything, I would not put more than 5% of my overall portfolio in this surging asset class, however.

Lastly, let’s take a look at the continued rally in the bond market, and continued drop in interest rates. What is the bond market telling us?

The bond market is telling us that there are a lot of nervous investors out there that continue to pile into the safety of U.S. bonds. Even with $17 trillion in debt, we are considered one of the safest places in the world. That is a scary thought. The bond market also does not foresee inflation, an overheated U.S. economy, or action by the FED any time soon.

Two final notes: Retail sales caught everybody by surprise this past week, by coming in very light. That was really a shock. Especially when most economists saw the extra money being saved at the gas pump going into the retail sector. Instead it seems to be going towards the necessities of life and paying off debt. Ah, that is no fun! Let’s wait for the next few reports, however. . I featured the retail sales report on Tuesday’s show.

Finally, earnings season is now getting ready to reach a feverish pitch. So far, we have heard from most of the big banks, and they have mostly disappointed. This coming week should give us a much better feel for where we are currently at in the U.S. economy.

Here is how we finished another week of triple digit days:

All that volatility, and yet very little change overall in the market this past week. India lowered their rates and their market had a very good week. I continue to like the India story. It has been good to be me so far.

U.S interest rates continue to plunge. This is good for the U.S. economy.

Gunderson Conservative Growth Model “C” Portfolio

This model is made up of mostly large-cap companies that I consider suitable for investors who have a conservative growth risk profile. Selections come from mostly the S&P 500 and the DJIA. Time horizon of at least 3-5 years would be appropriate. Investors need to be able to ride through swings up or down of at least 10-25%, however. Unforeseen world events are also always a risk!

This portfolio is up 71.31 since its Jan. 1, 2010 inception. This is net of an annual mgt. fee of 2% and all $7 trades.

Gunderson Model “D” Portfolio (Dividend & Growth)

This portfolio is for investors seeking Income along with the possibility of Growth. This is a good mix for retirees who are seeking a CD alternative-albeit with greater risk. This is my MOST CONSERVATIVE portfolio. Still, investors need to be able to handle 10-20% swing up or down. Again, unforeseen world events are always a risk. This portfolio currently has an average yield of 2.4%.

This portfolio is now up 32.40% since its August 5, 2011 inception. This portfolio is

I featured McKesson Corp. (MCK) on Wednesday's show.

Gunderson Model “B” (Moderate Risk Portfolio)

Co-Adviser: Stephen Gunderson

This model pulls from DJIA, Nasdaq, S&P Mid-cap, and a S&P Small-Cap stocks. It is more conservative than the Aggressive Growth Portfolio, and it is more aggressive than the Conservative Growth portfolio. When fully invested it will have about thirty positions. This portfolio could be heavily weighted in cash at times. It could also own INVERSE ETF's

Gunderson Aggressive Growth Model “A” Portfolio

This is my most aggressive portfolio. It is designed for investors with long-term time horizons, seeking maximum growth. It is also my most VOLATILE portfolio. Investors need to be able to stomach as much as 10-30% swings from time to time in an aggressive style of investing. This portfolio goes anyone in in the world, wherever the action is. It can also be heavily weighted in certain sectors of the market. Unforeseen world events will always be a risk to markets.

This portfolio is up 59.14% since its Jan. 1, 2011 inception. I bought

The stock was at $70.51 when I wrote the book in February of 2011. The stock was bought out for $190 per share approximately four years later.

Gunderson Model “E” Portfolio (ETF’s)

This portfolio is for investors seeking growth. Investors should have at least a five year time horizon and be able to handle swings of 10-25%. BIG LOSSES COULD OCCUR IF EXTREME EVENTS WERE TO HIT THE WORLD SUDDENLY.

This portfolio is now up 31.62% since its Jan. 1, 2013 inception.

Gunderson's Model "F" Portfolio (Funds/401-k)

Everyone has different choices to them in their 401-ks. The choices basically fall into several broad categories however: Large Cap, Mid-Cap, Small-Cap, Govt. Bond, Corp. Bond, Inflation Protected Bond, International, Emerging Market, and maybe sectors like technology, natural resources, etc.

I have added a number of mutual funds to my Best Stocks Now database that are representative of the various categories of funds that are available in most 401k plans. I grade them on a daily basis.

If you have a wide selection of mutual funds in your plan, here is my current recommendation. This portfolio is up 32.66 since it Jan. 1, 2013 (net of all fees and trading costs).

Gunderson Trading Model Portfolio (Model “T”)

This is my MOST AGGRESSIVE account. For the most part, these stocks are too small or too thinly traded for my managed accounts. This is not a day-trading account. I am looking to bag some big winners, while keeping a short leash on my positions. I am using 7-8% sell stops on most of these investments.
