CRANK UP THE PRINTING PRESS!

So says Mario Draghi, the European Central Bank (ECB) president!

With GDP of just 0.2%, unemployment at 10.8% and Greece on the verge of collapse, it was time for Draghi to do something big to save the Eurozone. And big it was. His announcement of 60 billion per month (in Euros) was bigger than most had expected. Where is he going to get the money to do this?

The answer is easy. PRINT IT!

Never mind that social programs are draining the European economy of growth. Never mind that Europe is not creating jobs. Never mind that Europe is not competitive in a global economy anymore. Never mind that interest rates on the German's ten-year are already at 0.50%. Never mind that Europe has a growing demographic problem.

The easy way out is to keep interest rates low by printing money. The hope is that this will force investors out of the bond market and into the equities markets. The European market has been selling off since July of last year. The ECB is trying to stem the tide.

Like Brady and the Patriots, Europe has a DEFLATION problem. Draghi is hoping to crank up Europe's inflation rate to the ECB's target of 2.0%. This could take quite a while. Europe's problems are much more systemic than the problems we faced back in 2008.

In other words, I am not anxious to run out and buy European stocks, mutual funds, or ETF's just yet. I am not convinced that their Quantitative Easing program will accomplish the results that we achieved here in America. Remember, Quantitative Easing is just a more palatable term than money printing.

Here is how European financials have responded so far.

Still in a downtrend.

European Small Cap Dividend stocks are at least going sideways, but they are badly lagging more favorable markets around the world.

Short sellers of European stocks have done pretty well lately, but they may have finally met their match here.

Meanwhile it sure is a great time to go on that European vacation! The Euro continues to get trashed, and printing up more will just dilute the currency that is already in circulation.

OUCH!

Even with a staggering seventeen trillion (17,000,000,000,000.00) in debt, investors from all over the world are racing into the safety of the U.S. dollar.

Gold is trying to rally against this backdrop, but that soaring dollar is a big impediment to higher precious metals prices. Deflation is also not a good scenario for gold.

Meanwhile oil continues to look for a bottom.

This mid $40 level seems to be holding for now, but it is still a real dicey situation.

I did nibble at one oil stock this past week. I intend on being patient with it. I have done well with this stock in the past. It was one of the 53 stocks that I featured in my book, Best Stocks Now, back in 2011.

I have been tempted lately to buy a gold stock or two, but have resisted so far. A crashing Euro seems to be the best shot that gold has right now.

Silver looks almost the same as gold right now. I have avoided the precious metals for several years, and although tempted to buy a little, I continue to talk myself out of it.

The U.S. markets really liked the news out of Europe on Friday. Here is how we finished a pretty good week in the market.

Both India and China had a very good week. These are the other two markets besides the U.S. that I currently like. You gotta go where the growth is!

With just three weeks of the new year in the books, here is where we currently stand. The jury is still out on the January Effect. U.S. markets are teetering back in forth across the line right now. India is off to a sizzling start so far.

"As January goes, so goes the market?" This week will determine the January Effect.

THE JURY IS STILL OUT ON HOW JANUARY WILL GO!

Last Saturday, I had the opportunity to go out fishing in the ocean off of San Diego. It is a big ocean out there and boats can use a lot of gas. I had to develop a plan of where to go before I left the fuel dock.

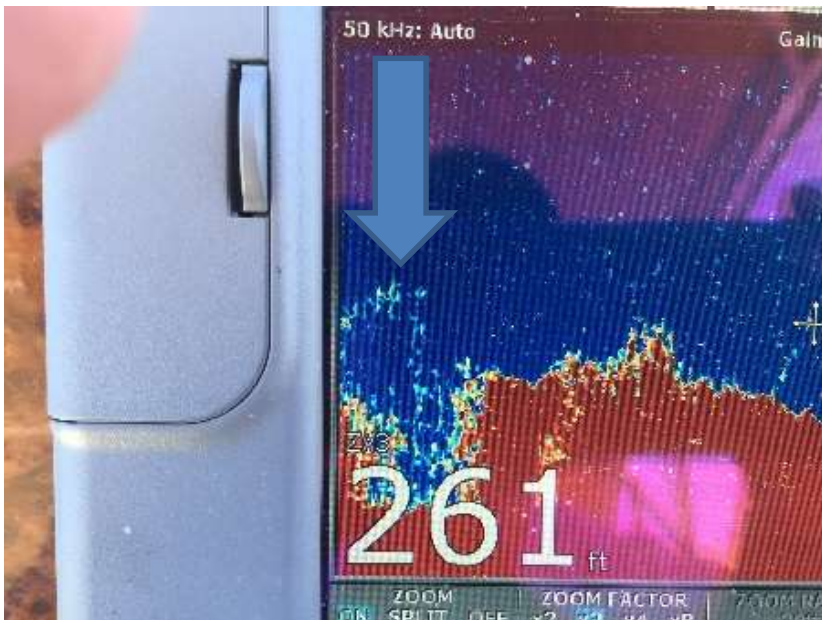

The first factor to consider is that it is winter in San Diego. The ocean water temperature is a very cool 62 degrees. That means that the pelagic fish have moved on, but there are still quite a few yellowtail hanging around from the big invasion that we had this past summer.

That is very much a hit or miss, high-risk proposition, however. In addition to this, the rockfish season in California is closed until March 1st. That narrowed my choices down considerably. I had to head for the Mexican side of the border, and I decided to fish deep for cold water rockfish, that reside in the ridges and canyons about 9 miles off of Point Loma.

I had chosen the class of fish that I was going to target (asset class), and I had chosen the country (world index) that I was going to fish in. Now it was time to search for the sector within that still wide area of potential fishing grounds.

I had read recent reports that the fish were being found in about 250-350 foot deep water. That further narrowed down the choices. Now I had a sector to narrow down my search to. Once I arrived, I turned on my fish finder and started looking. 99 percent of what I saw below was just flat desert with no fish life whatsoever.

Then I stumbled upon a crevice, 261 foot deep that was showing fish in it. So I positioned the boat right over it and we let go our rigs to the bottom.

As soon as our line stopped going out, we knew that we are on the bottom. It was not long until we felt the familiar "tap, tap" of fish hitting our offering.

I could tell that I had a pretty nice fish by the bend in my fishing pole on the long wind up. Sure enough, I had a nice 5-6 lb. red cod on the end of my line. My buddy had a nice Bocaccio.

We proceeded to catch several more, until we had enough for a couple of fish and chip dinners, or even some tasty fish tacos.

“Can somebody please pass the tartar sauce!”

It began with analyzing the seasonal conditions to determine the best class of fish to target. Next we took into account the part of the world that had the most favorable conditions. We then narrowed it down to the sectors of the ocean that were the most promising. Lastly we identified a high-probability spot to invest our time and energy into. It does not always produce fish, but at least we had the odds in our favor when our bait hits the bottom.

The stock market is no different. Right now, there are only a few asset classes worth chasing. Fishing is still very good in them. There are only a few places in the world that are experiencing growth. Fishing anywhere else would be a low probability proposition. And lastly, there are several sectors in the market that are still harboring some big fish right now.

Let's begin by searching the world for the best spots to invest in:

Commodities, and commodity related stocks are still the worst place to be. Commodities need global growth and inflation. Right now this does not exist. Being short the market has been the wrong place to be since 2009, and it is STILL the wrong place to be. It has not been good to be a Bear over the last six years! It will have its day in the sun at some point in time in the future, however

Here is my current ranking of the sixty equity sectors that I track on a daily basis. It is vital to be in the right sectors in the market.

Gunderson Conservative Growth Model "C" Portfolio

This model is made up of mostly large-cap companies that I consider suitable for investors who have a conservative growth risk profile. Selections come from mostly the S&P 500 and the DJIA. Time horizon of at least 3-5 years would be appropriate. Investors need to be able to ride through swings up or down of at least 10-25%, however. Unforeseen world events are also always a risk!

This portfolio is up 79.78% since its Jan. 1, 2010 inception. This is net of an annual mgt. fee of 2% and all $7 trades. I made no changes in this portfolio this past week. Cash level is now just 5.2%. These are the best Conservative Growth stocks that I can find at the current time.

2015 Conservative Growth Model Portfolio Sells-NONE

Gunderson Model “D” Portfolio (Dividend & Growth)

This portfolio is for investors seeking Income along with the possibility of Growth. This is a good mix for retirees who are seeking a CD alternative-albeit with greater risk. This is my MOST CONSERVATIVE portfolio. Still, investors need to be able to handle 10-20% swing up or down. Again, unforeseen world events are always a risk. This portfolio currently has an average yield of 2.4%.

This portfolio is now up 36.41% since its August 5, 2011 inception. This portfolio up 2.94% YTD. I

Gunderson Model “B” (Moderate Risk Portfolio)

Co-Adviser: Stephen Gunderson

This model pulls from DJIA, Nasdaq, S&P Mid-cap, and a S&P Small-Cap stocks. It is more conservative than the Aggressive Growth Portfolio, and it is more aggressive than the Conservative Growth portfolio. When fully invested it will have about thirty positions. This portfolio could be heavily weighted in cash at times. It could also own INVERSE ETF's

Time horizon of at least 3-5 years would be appropriate. Investors need to be able to ride through swings up or down of at least 10-25%, however. Unforeseen world events are also always a risk!

This is my most aggressive portfolio. It is designed for investors with long-term time horizons, seeking maximum growth. It is also my most VOLATILE portfolio. Investors need to be able to stomach as much as 10-30% swings from time to time in an aggressive style of investing. This portfolio goes anyone in in the world, wherever the action is. It can also be heavily weighted in certain sectors of the market. Unforeseen world events will always be a risk to markets.

Everyone has different choices to them in their 401-ks. The choices basically fall into several broad categories however: Large Cap, Mid-Cap, Small-Cap, Govt. Bond, Corp. Bond, Inflation Protected Bond, International, Emerging Market, and maybe sectors like technology, natural resources, etc.

I have added a number of mutual funds to my Best Stocks Now database that are representative of the various categories of funds that are available in most 401k plans. I grade them on a daily basis.

If you have a wide selection of mutual funds in your plan, here is my current recommendation. This portfolio is also off to a very good start in 2015. It is up 4.88% YTD and up 36.90 since it Jan. 1, 2013 (net of all fees and trading costs). I
