OIL GLUT...

(Bloomberg) -- A record surplus in U.S. crude inventories may soon strain the nation's storage capacity, renewing a slump in prices and curbing its output, according to the International Energy Agency.

The IEA boosted estimates for U.S. oil production this year as cutbacks in drilling rigs have so far failed to slow its output. Crude inventories threaten to fill tanks, with the nation's largest oil-storage hub in Cushing, Oklahoma 70 percent full, the agency said. The IEA raised its 2015 estimate of global oil demand by the most since it was introduced in July.

I recently dipped my little toe into the murky waters of oil stocks. I jumped the gun on my Best Stocks Now™ ranking system, but I thought I saw some promising chart patterns.

I was wrong. I should have waited for confirmation. I did not go overboard however, I did not load up, I just bought a few to see what would happen. They were moving in the right direction for a while, then they began to falter.

Let's take a look at what the recent news about an "oil glut" is doing to the commodity price.

West Texas Intermediate was making a nice recovery and then it started slipping back again. Now it is back to testing its $45 per barrel bottom once again. Given the recent news above, it does not look like it will hold.

I am out. I was wrong. I am glad that I did not dip two toes into the water.

It is important to admit when you are wrong in the market. Otherwise the market will chew you up and spit you out. I hear others doubling down on their oil recovery predictions.

This is not a wise thing to do. It is much better to limit your losses than to throw bad money after good.

I made a small foray into Continental Resources. It has been very good to me in the past. I am selling it just seven weeks later for a loss of 0.7%. I still hear pundits claiming that oil stocks are a “no-brainer” from here. I have heard that logic before. It has not turned out very well over the years.

I also hear, “I am buying more on the pullback.” This also has not been a very good strategy over the years. My motto is to buy that which is flourishing, not that which is floundering. The oil stocks are floundering once again.

Generally speaking, when the sectors goes, they all go. I got rid of my Concho for a manageable 7.4% loss. I was wrong here also.

I bought HP for my Growth & Income account because it also had a 4.4% dividend yield. Why not hold onto to then, it is still paying a nice dividend? That is fuzzy logic there. Who cares about the dividend if the stock is going down?

I have heard this same argument many times in the past. They try to convince me that holding onto a 4.4% dividend makes total sense. What do I care about the underlying stock?

Because it is all about TOTAL RETURN. If the stock goes down 10.4%, but you receive a 4.4% dividend yield, your net is a loss of 6%. Then why not double down at this level.

No thanks.

I was a little bit skeptical in the first place about the sudden, almost "V-like" recovery in oil, but greed sucked me in, nonetheless. I tried to be a hero. I was looking for those maximum, easy gains off of the bottom.

I know from experience that bottoms usually take a long time to develop. I was reminded once again of this fact. I think I will stick with my philosophy of stocks at or near new highs that are still cheap.

It seems to work a lot better...

Here is how we finished a very volatile week-several triple-digit days along the way.

From the scoreboard above, you can pretty much get a good idea where the troubling areas of the market are currently. In addition to dropping oil prices, the U.S. dollar continues to soar. Why?

Would you rather own the Euro?

My son is going on a short European vacation soon. The price of his trip is dropping by the day.

Why is the Euro getting hammered so badly? Money printing by the European Central Bank. They are attempting to stoke their economy and stock market.

How is it working out so far? Too soon to tell, but I am not seeing much yet.

The Europe currency hedged index is doing much better however.

I keep waiting for a pullback, but it hasn't happened yet.

The Japanese Yen is also not much competition for the U.S. Dollar right now.

At least it is trying to put in a bottom, however. The Japanese currency hedged index has also been a good play as of late.

Toyota continues to be my weak Japanese Yen play.

The strong U.S. dollar is killing big multi-nationals like Caterpillar. Our goods are just not very competitive on the world stage right now. This is one of the major factors that are worrying the market right now. What impact will this have on S&P 500 earnings?

The S&P 500 is now just barely negative on the year once again. A strong dollar and low oil prices are impacting earnings right now. Meanwhile, the Nasdaq is hanging on to a small gain, while Latin America continues to fall apart.

Now for the current ranking of the 34 asset classes that I track on a daily basis. I am not an asset allocator. I believe in being invested in the best asset classes, not the worst ones. That is why I am not in bonds, emerging markets, or precious metals.

Nine out of the ten top asset classes are still U.S. stock related. And even though U.S. stocks have entered into fair value territory, there are not a lot of alternatives that are better. NO CHANGE FROM LAST WEEK.

Here are this week's worst ranked asset classes. Avoid these neighborhoods.

Gunderson Conservative Growth Model “C” Portfolio

This model is made up of mostly large-cap companies that I consider suitable for investors who have a conservative growth risk profile. Selections come from mostly the S&P 500 and the DJIA. Time horizon of at least 3-5 years would be appropriate. Investors need to be able to ride through swings up or down of at least 10-25%, however. Unforeseen world events are also always a risk!

This portfolio is up 79.54% since its Jan. 1, 2010 inception. It is now up 6.01% YTD. This is net of an annual mgt. fee of 2% and all $3.50 trades. I sold

Gunderson Model “D” Portfolio (Dividend & Growth)

This portfolio is for investors seeking Income along with the possibility of Growth. This is a good mix for retirees who are seeking a CD alternative-albeit with greater risk. This is my MOST CONSERVATIVE portfolio. Still, investors need to be able to handle 10-25% swing up or down. Again, unforeseen world events are always a risk. This portfolio currently has an average yield of 2.0%.

This portfolio continues to do well. It is now up 39.01% since its August 5, 2011 inception. This portfolio is now up 4.91% YTD. I sold

Gunderson Model “B” (Moderate Risk Portfolio)

This model pulls from DJIA, Nasdaq, S&P Mid-cap, and a S&P Small-Cap stocks. It is more conservative than the Aggressive Growth Portfolio, and it is more aggressive than the Conservative Growth portfolio. When fully invested it will have about thirty positions. This portfolio could be heavily weighted in cash at times. It could also own INVERSE ETF's

Time horizon of at least 3-5 years would be appropriate. Investors need to be able to ride through swings up or down of at least 10-25%, however. Unforeseen world events are also always a risk!

This portfolio is off to a very good start. It is now up 8.15% YTD. I sold

Gunderson Aggressive Growth Model “A” Portfolio

This is my most aggressive portfolio. It is designed for investors with long-term time horizons, seeking maximum growth. It is also my most VOLATILE portfolio. Investors need to be able to stomach as much as 10-30% swings from time to time in an aggressive style of investing. This portfolio goes anywhere in the world, wherever the action is. It can also be heavily weighted in certain sectors of the market. Unforeseen world events will always be a risk to markets.

This portfolio is up 65.14% since its Jan. 1, 2011 inception. It is up 4.24% YTD. I sold

Gunderson Model “E” Portfolio (ETF’s)

This portfolio is for investors seeking growth. Investors should have at least a five year time horizon and be able to handle swings of 10-25%. BIG LOSSES COULD OCCUR IF EXTREME EVENTS WERE TO HIT THE WORLD SUDDENLY.

This portfolio continues to do well so far this year. It is now up 40.74% since its Jan. 1, 2013 inception, and it is up 9.42% YTD. I

Gunderson’s Model “F” Portfolio (Funds/401-k)

Everyone has different choices to them in their 401-ks. The choices basically fall into several broad categories however: Large Cap, Mid-Cap, Small-Cap, Govt. Bond, Corp. Bond, Inflation Protected Bond, International, Emerging Market, and maybe sectors like technology, natural resources, etc.

I have added a number of mutual funds to my Best Stocks Now database that are representative of the various categories of funds that are available in most 401k plans. I grade them on a daily basis.

If you have a wide selection of mutual funds in your plan, here is my current recommendation. This portfolio is also off to a very good start in 2015. It is up 10.01% YTD and up 43.64% since it Jan. 1, 2013 (net of all fees and trading costs). I
